

Working and Playing Well with Others...

Abstract:

This presentation provides effective and fun approaches for working with others – at work, in your personal life, anywhere you need to interact with others.

Understanding your own style and incorporating some knowledge of others' styles will provide excellent tools for all attendees.

The presentation will provide an overview of the four basic behavior styles in an informative and fun environment. This is an interactive and practical approach to playing better with others. Come ready to learn and laugh!

Attendees will take away:

- A renewed understanding of how they function within their own style
- Tips for working with the others (NOT your natural style)
- Tools for getting the best out of your interactions

Presenter: Sibyl Melin, CPIM, CIRM, CSCP

Sibyl Melin, CPIM, CIRM, CSCP is president and founder of Sundial Consulting Group, Carlsbad, California.

With more than 25 years of experience in operations management, her background and multiple industry experiences provide an excellent foundation. This consultant, educator, and speaker wins high praise from her corporate clients and students. Known for her passionate expressions for maintaining manufacturing excellence in North America, Sibyl brings facts, common sense, and humor to her audiences.

As an APICS instructor with over 15 years in front of students, her decades of operations, materials, cost accounting, and warehouse expertise means she has honed her presentations to match her audiences — whatever their part of the organization. As a corporate executive, Sibyl encountered many of the problems still facing organizations today and provides a wealth of lessons learned to her consulting clients and students. As a consultant and educator, she constantly searches for solutions to these challenges.

